A SCHOOLMARMS STORY.

A frosty chill was in the air—
How plainly I remember—
The bright autumnal fires had paled,
Save here and there an ember;
The sky looked hard, the hills were bare,
And there were tokens everywhere
That it had come—November.

I locked the time-worn schoolhouse door,
The village seat of learning,
Across the smooth, well-trodden path
My homeward footsteps turning;
My heart a troubled question bore,
And in my mind, as oft before,
A vexing thought was burning.

"Why is it up the hill all the way?"
Thus run my meditations;
The lessons had gone wrong that day,
And I had lost my patience.
"Is there no way to soften care,
And make it easier to bear
Life's sorrows and vexations?"

Across my pathway through the wood
A fallen tree was lying;
On this there sat two little girls,
And one of them was crying.
I heard her sob: "And if I could
I'd get my lessons awful good,
But what's the use of trying!"

And then the little hooded head
Sank on the other's shoulder;
The little weeper sought the arms
That opened to enfold her.
Against the young heart, kind and true,
She nestled close and neither knew
That I was a beholder.

And then I heard—ah! ne'er was known
Such judgement without malice,
Nor queenlier council ever heard
In senate, house, or palace!—
I should have failed there, I am sure,
Don't be discouraged; try once more,
And I will help you, Alice!

"And I will help you." This is how
To soften care and grieving:
Life is made easier to bear
By helping and by giving.
Here was the answer I had sought,
And I, the teacher, being taught
The secret of true living.

If "I will help you" were the rule,
How changed beyond all measure
Life would become! Each heavy load
Would be a golden treasure;
Pain and vexation be forgot;
Hope would prevail in every lot,
And life be only pleasure.

A Hundred Years to Come.

Who'll press for gold the crowded street
A hundred years to come?
Who'll tread yon church with willing feet
A hundred years to come?
Pale, trembling age, and fiery youth
And childhood, with its brow of truth,
The rich and poor, on land, on sea—
Where will the mighty millions be
A hundred years to come?

We all within our graves shall sleep,
A hundred years to come;
No living soul for us will weep,
A hundred years to come;
But other men our land will till,
And others then our streets will fill
And other birds will sing as gay,
And bright the sunshine as to-day,
A hundred years to come.

DODD'S BOY.

Now there was a boy who was a boy! No pale faced, sickly-looking youngster was he. An apple's redness wasn't a circumstance to the color of his cheeks, and his appetite might have raised the price of provisions. There wasn't such another in the town, nor in any other town. Just show us his match, name your price, and the money is yours.

Almost everybody called him "Dodd's boy," (although Dodd himself called him Sam)—so with us, Dodd's boy let it be.

How he could yell! In the wild prairies of the West there wasn't an Indian, who on hearing Dodd's boy's yell, wouldn't have been ashamed of his own weak war-whoop. But he wasn't always noisy. His voice could be low, and sweet and tender—for a bundle of contradictions was this boy of Dodd's.

A sharp one, too, was Dodd's boy! You couldn't pull any wool over his eyes! People said to do that, "one would have to get up mighty early in the morning." The truth was one couldn't have done it even if he had stayed up all night! Dodd's boy was as wide awake as wide awake could be!

There was no knowing where to have him. Across the street a moment ago—now yelling at your very heels—and quicker than you can turn round, across the street again laughing to burst his sides.

He wasn't a bad fellow, though—this boy of Dodd's—don't think it! He never did a mean or cruel thing in his life. All the dogs and cats in the neighborhood liked him, and Dodd himself said he was worth his weight in gold; which was praise indeed; for he was the village butcher, and had taken the boy out of charity, and was very hard to please.

Dodd's boy was in love. You needn't laugh! What right-minded lad has no place in his heart for some pretty little fairy? Show him to us, let us look at him, and see how quickly we will show you, that he is a fraud, and not right-minded at all!

His fairy's name was Dolly, and she was Dodd's daughter. After seeing her you never would have blamed the boy for loving her. Why attempt to describe her? Pen of mortal could not do it. Imagine her as sweet and pretty as you please, and you cannot do her justice!

Dodd lived away from his shop, in a little two-story cottage, just outside the town. Belonging to the cottage was the neatest, cleanest, little stable you ever saw. In it was Dodd's boy's room—neat and clean, too as everything had to be about that stable.

The boy was considered quite a member of the family, and spent his evenings with them. He thought the little parlor, with its little piano, and other attractions too numerous to mention, the very summit of earthly grandeur.

It may be mentioned here that everything about the premises was on a small, cunning scale.

When Dolly sat at the little piano and sang, (wonderfully like a bird!) the boy listened, with ears, eyes and mouth wide open.

We couldn't begin to tell you all the songs she sang; but there was one the boy loved to listen to better than all the rest. An older friend in the spirit of mischief, had taught her it; and in truth it was a strange story for such a little girl to sing. Even now it is known everywhere as "Tender and True." Dolly only knew the first few lines, which are these:

"Could ye come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,
In the old likeness that I knew?
I would be so faithful, so loving, Douglas,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true;
Never scornful word should pain you—
I'd smile as sweet as the angels do."

You better believe that song was the boy's favorite. We really believe he would have listened to it for days, without even stopping for meals!

On a certain night, memorable in the history of Dodd's boy, Dolly, after playing and singing ever so long, had gone to bed thoroughly tired. He had gone to his room; but, being neither tired nor sleepy, was reading. The moon's silver light shone in so beautifully that he laid aside his book and blew out the flame of his coal-oil lamp. Moonlight and coal-oil!—the boy had too much taste to like a combination like that:

He stood by the window, thinking about the moon, and stars, and God! There was a vein of sentiment in him—and good sentiment, too—although he was only a butcher's boy.

A sound broke the sweet, deep silence; no, not broke the silence, but melted into it, and seemed almost a part of it. Because it seemed so, and that he was half dreaming, at first the boy was not startled. But the sound growing more strong and clear, he started and listened, wondering.

"Never a scornful word should pain you—
I'd smile as sweet as the angels do."

Dolly's song and Dolly's voice at that hour.

His heart beat faster. It took a great leap! In three jumps he was at the head of the stairs; in three more at the foot. In a few seconds he was in the open air, praying God to save her.

There, clad in her night dress, upon the roof of the house, stood Dolly.

For the moment the sight made Dodd's boy powerless. He shuddered as he saw Dolly begin to walk along the very edge. The danger which had benumbed him, brought him to himself.

Dodd's boy was quite a reader, and remembering what he read, knew a thing or two. She was walking in her sleep—there could be no doubt of that. He had read once that to cry out to one walking in sleep is dangerous. There was but one way—he counted the danger to himself as nothing.

"I must walk below her," he thought. "The roof's not high, and if she falls, I can save her from these cruel bricks. It dosn't make any difference if I do get hurt."

Fine fellow. Dodd's boy!

Back and forth her little feet bore her along the roof's edge; and below, exactly beneath her, walked the boy.

After a little she stood still again and sang.

With a feeling that was almost one of awe, he listened to her. How strangely like she was to those child-angels he had seen in dreams singing upon the walls of Heaven!

Beautiful as she was, with the moonlight streaming on her, it was sad to see her thus so near to danger and perhaps to death!—sad to hear that sweet voice, which in a moment might be stilled forever!—and she so unconcious of it all!

When the song died away, as Eolian harps still with the dying wind, she turned and disappeared.

Dodd's boy heard her stepping to the other side of the roof.

In an agony of fear he ran around.

Not an instant to soon!

One step to far, and she fell.

But into his arms! into his arms!

The shock bore him to the ground, and he felt terrible pain in his arms that had saved her.

Dolly's shrieks aroused her father, who coming quickly out, held her soothingly to his breast, only a little hurt.

But what of Dodd's boy.

He lay there striving to keep back the groans that would come. He had saved the child; but poor fellow! both of his arms were broked!

When they bore him in, and laid him tenderly, so tenderly, upon the best bed in the house, and Dolly wept over him, he did not mind the pain so much; when Mr. Dodd said he was a hero, he felt proud; and when the doctor came, and the broken limbs were set, and Dolly said that she would be his nurse till he was strong and well again, he felt happy and content.

Indeed she kept her promise! Though he was helpless, and often in much pain, those days passed like a pleasant dream. Years after, when he was a wanderer from that home and her, the sweet face that had wept and laughed with him was mirrored in his heart.

There is more to tell. They, with hearts so dry as to laugh at love, had better turn away. The broken arms healed and became strong and shapely again. The time came, a sad time to all of them, when the boy left Dodd, Dodd's daughter, and went into the great world to seek his fortune.

He found it too! but found no forgetfulness of his child love.

No longer Dodd's boy, but a man who had made a name to be proud of, he returned to look upon the face of his fairy once more.

When he called he asked:

"Is Mr. Dodd in?"

No, Mr Dodd had "just stepped out for a little while."

"Is Miss Dodd in?"

The formal Miss Dodd almost stuck in his throat.

Yes, she was in.

He sent up his card.

Wasn't that funny? Dodd's boy sending up a card.

"What will the meeting be like?" he thought, as he waited for her. "Now that she is a young lady, will there be any of the childish heartiness of old in her manner? Or will she have grown beyond and forgetful of me?" And Dodd's boy that was, sighed!

When she enters the room he is ashamed of his doubts. She holds out both hands to him with such a smile of welcome that he fancies he sees the Dolly of old!

Soon Dodd comes in, and gives his hearty greeting.

Like the sensible, sympathetic man he is, after a little while he says:

"I must really go to bed."

So he goes.

Dodd's boy that was, and the child Dolly that was, the noble man and woman who are, are alone again.

You may guess what he said to her—the question he asked her so earnestly.

You may guess what Dolly's answer was, when, stepping to the little piano, she gave it in almost the exact words of the old song:

"You have come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,
In the old likeness that I knew;
I will be so faithful, so loving, Douglas,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

Always Nipping.

A judicious wife is always nipping off from her husband's moral nature little twigs that are growing in wrong directions. She keeps him in shape by continually pruning. If you say anything silly, she will affectionately tell you so. If you declare you will do some absurd thing she finds some means of preventing you from doing it. And by far the chief part of the common sense there is in the world belongs unquestionably to women. The wisest things a man commonly does are those things which his wife counsels him to do. A wife is a grand wielder of the moral pruning knife. If Johnson's wife had lived there would have been no hoarding up of orange-peel, no touching all the posts in walking along the streets, no eating and drinking with a disgusting voracity. If Oliver Goldsmith had been married, he never would have worn that memorable and ridiculous coat. Whenever you find a man whom you know little about oddly dressed, or talking absurdly, or exhibiting eccentricities of manner, you may be sure that he is not a married man, for the corners are rounded off—the little shoots pared away—in married men. Wives have generally more sense than their husbands, even though they may be clever men. The wife's advice is like the ballast that keeps the ship steady.

Effect of California's Climate.

There can hardly be any question of the climate causes of nervousness and restlessness here. Men can never rest anywhere. They are restless during business; they drop into saloons and drink; they rush home; they are hardly there before they want to be off somewhere; a quiet, pleasant evening is out of the question. I have noticed from the experience of many people I know that there is some climatic cause for this. A friend of mine went up north, and on his return noted the most extraordinary change While away he had felt quite inclined to rest. He did his business very quietly and enjoyed himself. As soo as he landed in San Francisco the old nervous spirit appeared. He hurried home. He felt that he could not settle anywhere, and he hurries now everywhere and is forever restless.

Come With the Crowd.

A Few Words of Sound Advice to the Rising Generation.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

See here, my boy! The bells have rung the old year out and the new one in, and a new watch has come on deck. If you think you are going right along in the same old grooves, while the rest of us are making changes, you are up a tree. You've got to toe the mark along with the remainder of the world.

Now, then; you are beginning life. You are from 16 to 21 years old. You think you know all about it, but the fact is you arn't more than half-baked yet. What you don't know would cover all Lake Erie, while your worldly wisdom would'nt knock an owl off his perch. Suppose you make a resolve to begin the year 1884 by not knowing more than half as much as Plato, Diogenes and other wise men. If you should condescend to admit that you didn't even know more than your own father, it wouldn't greatly affect your general standing with the world.

Perhaps you smoke or chew. What for? What's the use of paying out $100 a year to insure bad breath, headaches, red eyes, decayed teeth and nervous debility, when you can secure a broken leg, which is far nicer, by a tumble-down stairs? Chewing is a vicious, nasty habit. Smoking affects the brain and nerves and stomach. We admit that a young chap of your age looks like a great statesman when he comes down the avenue puffing away at a five-cent grab, but suppose you didn't look like anybody but yourself?

Maybe you drink a little; very probably you do. A young man of your age is apt to think it smart to guzzle down lager and tipple wine, but there's where he is lame. Even old drunkards would caution you against the practice. Drink not only wastes money, but it severs friendships, breeds anger, brings about quarrels, and there is no end to the train of wretchedness it entails. Yes, great lawyers, statesmen, poets and philosophers drink, but they loose respect by it. Men have a contempt for their weakness, and the world reads their epitaphs with sneers. Don't make a persimmon of yourself because someone else has.

Played poker or faro yet? If so we hope you got such a skinning as will last your life-time. Let gambling alone. Fight as shy of gambling rooms as you would of a mad dog. People tell you about luck. That's all bosh. The gambler has you by the throat the moment you enter his door. You can't make any money out of him, but he will see to it that you add to his capital.

Now, as your personal traits. You may come naturally by your egotism, but keep it in check. The world in general looks upon it as a disease. Even if you know all you think you know the rest of us won't admire it. Men hate boasters and braggarts.

Bluntness is a good thing sometimes; sometimes it isn't. Civility and a conscientious regard for other people's feelings are trump cards in the game of life. Be charitable without encouraging vice; be honest in your opinions, but don't imagine that it is your duty to break up a family or start a church scandal; in your dealings be square. You may loose it for a time, but when the public comes to understand that you are a just and upright man you'll make money and keep friends as well.

In fact, young man, suppose you square up with your tailor, pay the balance at your boot-makers, part your hair on the side and fall into procession with the rest of us. We don't claim to be pretty, and we don't own all the brains in the country, but we can teach you several things that may come useful in future years, and we guarantee to prove that horse sense and square dealing are certain to pay a semi-annual dividend.

Forests and Drainage.

Cover a table with a thick stratum of spongy moss and pour on a gallon of water. The water will ooze through and trickle down the table, but very slowly, day by day, and that process of filteration will continue for a long time; four hours after the table will still be dripping wet. Then remove the moss and empty the same gallon pot on the centre of the table. This time the deluge will pour down in a thick rush and four hours later the table will be as dry as if nothing had happened. With the same difference of result a rain shower acts on a wood ed and treeless country. The forest, with its net-work of moss and roots, absorbs nine-tenths of the moisture, and yields it slowly in brooks and perrenial springs. A naked hill permits it to pour down in rapid deluge, brooks swell to torrents and rivers to seas; but in the summer time those same rivers shrink to shallow creeks, their head waters in the treeless mountains have run dry.

Popperman's Golded Wisdom.

'I believe I'm being robbed,' said Mr. Popperman to his wife, as he entered his room.

'By whom?'

'By Walter, my grocery clerk. I went into the store to-day and discovered him in the act of putting something in his pocket. I also heard, or thought I heard, a sound such as would be made by one coin falling on another in a person's pocket. I said nothing to the clerk, as I did not desire to accuse him until I was certain of his dishonesty.'

'Are you sure you heard the coins clinking in his pocket?' asked Mrs. Popperman.

'No, I'm not sure. Here, I'll experiment, and determine if such a sound can be heard twenty feet off. Take these two $10 gold pieces. Stand near the door. Put one in your pocket, and drop the other one upon it. I will listen.'

Mrs. Popperman did as directed, and then asked:

'Did you hear it?'

'Yes, I heard it. Consequently the result of my experiment is——'

'That I'll have a new $20 bonnet before I sleep this night,' exclaimed Mrs. Popperman, as she snatched up her false front and slid out of the front door.

Introduced by a Horse.

In colonial times before the establishment of stage coaches, travelers between Boston and Philadelphia usually performed the journey on horse back. Benjamin Franklin was fond of this mode of conveyance, and while on his way to visit his native city, bought a a fine black horse, which had once belonged to a Connecticut minister.

He happened on his journey to pass near the house of another clergyman, an intimate friend of the former owner. The house stood at the end of a long lane. As the horse came to the lane he instantly wheeled into it. Franklin sought in vain to turn him back into the main road.

He then loosened the rein, and the horse swiftly galloped to the house.

The family came out, the clergyman leading and bowing courteously. Franklin raised his hat and said:

"I am Benjamin Franklin, of Philadelphia, I am travelling to Boston, and my horse seems to have some business with you, as he insisted on coming to your house."

"Oh," replied the clergyman, smiling, "that horse has often been here before. Pray alight, and come in and lodge with us to-night."

The invitation was frankly accepted, and a delightful evening followed. A friendship was formed for life; and Franklin never passed that way without a cordial welcome. He often said he was the only man who was introduced by his horse.

A STRANGE COUTSHIP.

An old batchelor German immigrant, who is tilling the soil in Dakota, tiring of his solitary lot, but finding no helpmate near, wrote some time ago to his aged mother in Germany, asking her to chose and send him a wife. She replied that she knew the right woman, but she was living in Brazil. She wrote to the woman, however, inclosing the son's photograph, describing him and his life, and proposing to her to share it. The suggestion found favor in her eyes, and through the mother the son was informed. Further correspondence followed, giving directions, and the means of travel, and a few weeks ago the heroine of this singular triangular courtship came from Brazil to New York, and thence went west to meet her husband.

John Logan's Grandson.

A Washington letter says: General Logan's little grandson, Logan Tucker, is one of those odd, wise little children who are always surprising their elders with same unforeseen speech. This five year old mite was on the knees of one of General Logan's friends the other day, and the gentleman producing a shiny new nickel, made the youngster's black eyes dance. The little fellow looked over at his mother, who shook her head and signalled for him not to take the gift, and then glanced at his grandfather, who gave him a stern look and another meaning nod. The Logan blood rose in the little namesake then, and grasping the new coin the harder, he put up his head and said in a tone of argument and entreaty: Why, grandpa, he don't want any office!" The small boy won the case that time, and the little group were convulsed at the innocent proof of the way iniquity underlies everything in this political city.

ANOTHER LITTLE QUEEN.

'What shall we name baby sister?' asked a mother of her little four-year-old daughter.

'Call her Early, mamma; that's a pretty name.'

'Early! That's not a little girl's name.'

'Oh, yes it is. Don't you remember you read to me about the little girl who was to be the May Queen, and who wanted her mother to call her early.'

A COLD SNAP.

'I had hardly entered the room,' said he, with a tremulous voice, 'when a mist suddenly gathered before my eyes. I was unable to see an inch in front of me. I heard the murmur of voices, and then—'

'You fainted,' quickly put in his friend.

'No; I wiped the frost off my glasses.'

A GENTLE REMINDER.

'Will you be good enough to bring me some butter?' said a traveler to a hotel waiter.

'You have butter on your butter dish, sir,' returned the haughty night of the soup-ladle, in reproachful tones.

'Oh! excuse me,' said the traveler, 'I took it for a grease spot.'

And then no sound could be heard except the gentle rustle of the dinner gong.

A HARD WORKER.

As showing the honesty of the average ward striker, a prominent politician warrants that at a recent election, when he was a candidate for office, he went to a poll in the eastern part of the city on election day, and was mysteriously beckoned to one side by a colored man.

'What do you want?' said I.

'Jess a leetle money, boss; jess a leetle money to treat the boys. I'se a wuckin' hard fur yer, bors, I is.'

He had a large package of tickets in his hand, and I thought I'd see how hard he was 'wuckin' for me, so I grabbed them away from him, and you may shoot me if my name wasn't scratched off every one of them.

A lady while engaged in the pursuit of her domestic duties, encountered a mouse in the flour barrel. She summoned the man servant and told him to get a gun, call the dog and station himself at a convenient distance. Then she clambered up-stairs and commenced to punch the flour barrel with a pole. Presently the mouse made its appearance and started across the floor. The dog started at once in pursuit. The man fired and the dog dropped dead. The lady fainted, fell down the stairs, and the man thinking that she was killed, and fearing that he would be arrested for murder, disappeared, and has not been seen since. The mouse escaped.

P. GRAY MEEK, Chairman

THE first State election this year will be held in Rhode Island on the first Wednesday of April, and the next will be in Oregon the first Monday of June. The Republicans now hold both of these States by good majorities, and are likely to retain them. The results, therefore, will have but little significance, showing neither loss nor gain for either party. Probably the Democrats will not make a serious effort in either State, though there is no doubt that Rhode Island would take her place in the Democratic column if the fourteenth amendment, guaranteeing every American citizen the right to vote, could be enforced.

A Word to Mr. Morrison.

In 1868 the Democrats held their National Convention in New York. Horatie Seymour, New York's most most honored statesman, was nominated for President.

On the committee on Resolutions were James A. Bayard, of Delaware; William J. Allen, of Illinois; George W. Glick, of Kansas, now Democratic Governor of the State; William Preston, of Kentucky; Henry C. Murphy, of New York; Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, and Thomas S. Bocock, of Virginia.

The platform declared in favor of "a tariff for revenue upon foreign imports, and such equal taxation under the internal revenue laws as will afford incidential protection to domestic manufacturers, and as will, without imparing the revenue, impose the least burden upon the best promote and encourage the great industrial interests of the country."

Upon this platform Gov. Seymour ran and carried the State of New York over the patronage of the Administration, the prejudices of the war and the great military prestige of Gen. Grant.

It voiced the principles of the Democratic party then. It speaks the principles of the party now.

Only upon the Seymonr platform or something like it can New York be carried by the Democrats in 1884.—Sunbury Democrat.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March, 17. 1884.

It is quite common in these days for people to sigh over the degeneracy of modern politicians and to contrast the eloquence and ability of the men who served in Congress with Webster and Calhoun and Clay with the commonplace stupidity of the public men of to-day. I have no doubt, however, that the House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth Congress will compare favorably in point of intelligence, and in point of ability to show that intelligence, to the best advantage of any House which has preceeded it. It may be this very fact which tends to make the lower house cumbrous and unwieldy in the transaction of public business, because a man who can talk well is apt to talk often and regardless of the fact that "time flies." One great difference between the Congress of to-day and that of fifty or more years ago is that the general average of ability is greater and that brilliant men shine out less conspiously. In the present Congress the proportion of members serving a first term is usually large, and the number of them who have proved themselves able to coup with their more experienced colleagues surprisingly so. Among the new members who have shown marked ability are Adams, of New York, who came into prominence by a fine speech on the Chalmers-Manning election case and his connection with the committee investigating Keifer; and Broadhead, of Missouri, who, though now in legislative halls, has long been known as a man of recognized ability.

The California delegation, composed with one exception entirely of new and young men, is the strongest which the State has ever sent. And it is not a demagogical delegation, which is something to say for California. Mr. Finerty is the only man whom Illinois has sent for the first time who has made himself prominent, and, though his objection to the "Alert" resolution was a piece of petty spite, his earnest appeal for a new navy shows that his spite has something behind it stronger than mere demagoguism. Thomas A Robertson, fresh from Kentucky, seems to be of that indolent disposition which always characterizes one or two men in that delegation, but judging from some brief remarks he has made to the House he might prove a bad customer to trifle with in discussion. One of the best speeches made against the Fitz John Porter bill, was by Cutcheon, of Michigan, and one of the most rattling replies thereto by Laird, of Nebraska, both being new members. Pennsylvania sends many new members, who will, no doubt, make a stir before they retire. Mr. Eliott, the member-at-large, is one of the youngest members of the House, but he already has taken a leading position and is recognized, not only as an able lawyer, but a strong and brilliant orator. Ray, of New York, made a very good speech on the Fitz John Porter bill, and succeeded in gaining the attention of his collegues on the floor after they had once started on a run for the cloak rooms, as is usual when a new member begins to talk.

The bill pensioning Mexican veterans finally passed the House, although it was stated that only 2,000 of those who fought in Mexico were from the Northern States, and that of the 40,000 from the South 20,000 served afterward in the confederate army, so this was in one sense a bill to pension rebel soldiers. The bill was passed by a large majority, and the Southern Congressmen are highly gratified. They say that, while their section was suffering from the effects of the war, when ruined houses had not been rebuilt, and when broken fortunes and blasted lives were more common than prosperity and happiness, the Southern people, through their agents in Congress, have quietly voted to tax all they possess, or might procure, in order to surround the Union soldiers with the comforts of life. This is true. The "Southern brigadiers" have always voted in Congress for pensions and arrearages for the Union veteran.

The labored articles sent out by friends of Arthur, to the effect that he is virtuously lying back for the people to reelect him without making any effort on his own part, causes a broad smile to illume the features of those who know just what is going on. As a matter of fact, no President ever used his position for the purpose of securing a renomination to a greater extent than Arthur is now doing. Mr. Blaine seems to be a disturber of the peace among the Republican candidates. "He is not seeking the nomination," say his friends, and apparantly the Plumed Knight is undisturbed by the dreams that haunt others who have the White House in their line of vision. The veteran politicians, however, do not credit the statements of Blaine's friends, and his unquestionable popularity with the masses of his party in certain States causes well grounded apprehension. Blaine may not be seeking the nomination, but he is not indifferent to the progress of the canvass being made by those who are seeking it, and that he will exert a potent influence at the Chicago convention is morally certain. No man named in connection with the nomination is so full of resource as Blaine, and it would not be snrprising to see him enter last on the list and steadily rise to the top. He is likely to have his State delegation solid behind him. Pennsylvania and Ohio promise to send a fair sprinkling of Blaine delegates, and in certain of the Northwestern States his popularity will surely result in accrediting delegates who will prefer the Main statesmen as first or second choice. Blaine is not seeking the Presidency, because he is one of those sagacious men who learn from experience. Having failed twice while seeking the nomination, Mr. Blaine has undoubtedly concluded to hunt the game without the noisy accompaniments hitherto employed.

PHONO,

Great Destruction of Property and Several Persons Hurt in Saline County, Illinois, by a Cyclone.

ST. LOUIS, March 12.—A terrific cyclone swept through Saline county, Illinois, yesterday afternoon. Reports from Harrisburg, a hundred miles south of St. Louis, state that a lady standing on her porch, observing the rising cloud in the southward at about 3.30 o'clock, noticed the clouds rolling one over another and darkness soon began to cover the earth. Presently the clouds assumed a funnel shape, from which emanated a roaring sound like that of at approaching freight train, and two murky, leaden clouds sped from the southwest to the northeast with incredible velocity. Trees, fences, hay-stacks, houses and barns fell and were torn into fragments.

John Stiff's dwelling and barn were destroyed. There were twelve persons in the house, but Mrs. Stiff only was injured. A colored man named Ferry had his house and crib blown down. John Hicks' new dwelling was blown from its foundation, not a vestige of in remaining. David Price's corn crib was shaken to the ground. Robert Fleetwood's house and barn were blown down and his corn, a large amount of tobacco, hay and grain destroyed. The house of Dr. V. Rathborne, in the track of the storm was destroyed. Patrick Shea's barn and other buildings were destroyed and his wife seriously injured. Mr. Grandstaff's dwelling was destroyed and his wife badly hurt. Much damage was done in Cottage Grove precinct, seven miles east, but owing to the impassable condition of the roads no definite information has yet come in.

An unknown drunken tramp fell between the boilers at the blast furnace of the Bethlehem iron company on Sunday, the 24, and was roasted to death.

—McDonald's improved Liver Pills are the most reliable and satisfactory Liver Pills made. Many Doctors buy them by the thousand for use in their daily practice. Dissatisfied buyers can have their money refunded. Sold by J. Eisenhuth, Milliheim, Pa.

—An exchange very truly says:

To make a newspaper interesting it is necessary that the editor should be made acquainted with the news. Many people who know of items worth publishing, quietly keep them to themselves, and find fault with the paper because no mention was made of them. People whose friends die give the paper no mention of the fact, and then feel hurt because an obituary does not appear. People who get married feel slighted if the announcement is not made in the marriage column. We cannot publish news or items of any kind of which we have no knowledge, and the only way we can get them is to have those interested hand them in. All we ask is that the facts be given; we will will put them in proper shape.

IT TELLS ITS OWN STORY.—Lancaster, N. H., Dec. 3, '79. By the way I will say that I think Downs' Elixer the best cough remedy that I can find at our Druggists. We always use it.

—A paying investment.—At this season of the year when your cows fail in milk, your horses become rough in coat, your pigs refuse to thrive, the hens won't lay as many eggs as they should, you will find a package or two of McDonald's Celebrated Tonic and Blood Purifying Horse and Cattle Powders judiciously administered an investment that will pay big dividends. They are positively the best Horse and Cattle Powders made. Dissatisfied buyers can have their money refunded. What other manufacturer dare make this offer. Sold by J. Eisenhuth, Millheim, Pa.

—Within the past few days rumors are afloat in certain quarters that are not only groundless but really mischievous. Anything calculated to impair the standing of substantial business men will work injury, not only to individuals but to the community as well. And when rumors of this kind are circulated against such a solid and substantial institution as the Millheim Banking Company, there may be much mischief done, whether intended or not. The Company is strong, both individually and collectively, its officers are well and favorably known these many years and have and deserve the continued confidence of our citizens and business men. There is not the slightest cause for alarm, and we think there will be none.

—The piles of ground and foundation stones, stacks of lumber and shingles noticeable in different parts of our borough, especially on the new street, called Water street, indicate that the building season will be a busy one for Millheim. The frame work of several hones will be raised during next week.

—Rev. H. A. Benfer and his charming young wife, whose marriage we announce in another column of this week's JOURNAL, returned from their short wedding trip yesterday and were made the recipients of a splendid lot of donations by their many friends and acquaintances last evening. The happy couple have our heartiest congratulations.

—Now that the sudden and violent changes of the weather occur every twenty four hours, almost everyone has a troublesome cold, which, if neglected may produce results that will trouble you for the remainder of your life. Dr. Kessler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine is especially deserving praise in this class of complaints. It never fails! It never disappoints! Instructions for treatment of croup and whooping cough also accompany each bottle. Every family especially where there is children should have a bottle. Dissatisfied buyers can have their money refunded. Sold by J. Eisenhuth, Millheim, Pa.

—PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for April is of sterling merit, even more so than usual. It opens with a charming steel-engraving, "The Little Gleaner." Then comes a double-sized, colored, steel fashion-plate; four patterns for D'Oyleys, embroidered, printed in colors; and quite half a hundred wood-engravings of fashions, designs for worktable, etc., etc. The stories, as usual, are the best of their kind. They lead off with "The Utterly Utter Boston Browns," illustrated, that is full of racy wit. "Peterson," in short, gets better and better. The price is still only two dollars a year. To clubs it is astonishingly low, viz: four copies for six dollars and a half, with an extra copy to the person getting up the club. Or five copies for eight dollars, with both an extra copy and "Tired Out," a splendid steel-engraving, or "The Golden Gift," illustrated, for getting up the club. Specimens are sent, gratis, to persons getting up clubs. It is not too late to subscribe for 1884. Address CHAS. J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Miscellaneous.

CHURCH PROPERTY NOT TAXABLE.—The Supreme Court has just decided that church properties are not liable to taxes for municipal improvements. The city of Erie, in constructing a sewer in front of the First Universalist church, assessed the ground for the number of feet fronting on the street where the sewer was laid. The church claimed exemption under the law freeing taxation, grounds and buildings dedicated to public worship, but the city claimed that the assessment was not taxation. The court sustained the church and the decision has been reaffirmed by the higher tribunal.

About two months ago, William Hamor, living at Highspire, Pa., was bitten on the thumb by a Spitz dog. He had the wound cauterized at once. Last Saturday evening he began to feel sick, and grew constantly worse. He was attacked by terrible spasms, and was bound to the floor to prevent personal injury. During his delierium he kept crying that he would die during the night. As evening came on his condition became worse and worse. When the sufferer felt the approach of the terrible spasms he requested to be locked in a room alone, and when they had passed he would knock on the door for his friends to enter. In his conscious moments he told his friends that he was going to die, and in one of these lucid intervals he bade his wife goodbye. About 9 o'clock Tuesday night his awful sufferings ended in death. Deceased was aged about thirty years.

KILLED IN A COAL MINE.

One Hundred and Fifty-Five Dead.

POCOHONTAS, Va., March 13.

A terrible gas explosion occured at 1 o'clock this morning in the Laurel Caeek Mine, operated by the Southwest improvement Company, at this place. The Laurel Creek Mine is the only one in this section and has been operated for about two years. It consists of a tunnel, running three-quarters of a mile into the mountain side and a railroad runs the entire length of the mine. There are latent galleries at intervals. The mines have been worked by relief every six hours.

One hundred and fifty-five men were at work there, and such was the force of the explosion that every one was killed and the fanning machine and engine were blown three hundred feet away from the entrance. A train of cars drawn by a small engine was near the entrance, moving in the mine at the time. Four cars and the engine were blown out, and a car axle was propelled by the force of the explosion into the side of a small frame house, several hundred feet distant, occupied by two miners, William Maloney and Jake Sexton. Both were asleep, having left the mine about 6 o'clock. The flying plank awoke them. Their escape was wonderful, the iron wheels of the car falling by the side of their bunks. They struck a light and, so far as can be learned, were the first to realize the situation and give the alarm.

Of those at work in or about the mine not one was left to tell the story. The people of the little hamlet, whose population numbers about five hundred, were asleep when the explosion took place. But the whole place was quickly roused and the scene that followed beggars description.

The few living beings who saw a puff of smoke shoot from the mine and the sudden upheaval of the engine and cars rushed into the town with loud cries for help. Men, women and children were roused and as they took in the intelligence there was a wild rush for the scene of the disaster. Despite the cold night, women as well as men rushed off scantily clad. Experienced miners upon reaching the scene were satisfied that no man in the mines was alive. The horror of the situation has been intensified by the discovery that the mines are on fire.

MARRIED.

On the 13th inst., at Millheim, Pa., by Rev. Benj. Hengst, Rev. Harry A. Benfer, of the Central Penna. Conference, Evangelical Association, and Miss Annie L., only daughter of the officiating minister.

DIED.

On the 5th inst., in Haines township, Estella Elizabeth, daughter of J. Newton and Emma Straub, aged 1 year, 10 months and 1 day.

On the 9th inst., at her residence in Aaronsburg, after a protracted illness, Mrs. Mary Mumbower, wife of Peter Mumbower, dec'd, and mother of Mrs. Dr. Musser, aged 79 years, 11 months and 9 days.

Mrs. Mumbower was born in Penn twp., Centre Co., Pa. Her father died when she was but 4 or 5 years old. Her mother whose maiden name was Kulm, then returned with her two daughters, Mary and her sister, subsequently Mrs. John Keen of Millheim, to their former home in Bucks County, Pa. Here she resided until the subject of this obituary, entered the holy state of matrimony with Mr. Peter Mumbower. They then all returned to Penns Valley and resided near Millheim. Mr. Mumbower died in 1857. Since then to the time of her death the deceased lived in Aaronsburg, Pa. Her remains were intered in the Reformed Cemetery. The funeral took place on Wednesday, the 12th. inst., at 10 o'clock. Two addresses were given on the occasion, one in German by her pastor and the other in English by Rev. Z. A. Yearick. J. T.

Peculiarly American

"Why does that gentleman rise from his seat ?"

"Because he gets out at the next station."

"But we have not got near the station yet."

"I beg your pardon. From an American point of view we are very near it. It is less than a mile away."

"See, he rushes wildly toward the door ; and now he is on the platform. Is he not in danger ?"

"The only danger he dreads is the danger of loosing one-quarter of a second."

"Ah, we are almost at the station now. Will he wait till the cars stop ?"

"No, indeed ; that would be a waste of precious time."

"There he goes. Good Heavens ! he has fallen ! The cars have run over him.

"Yes, such things frequently happen in America ; but, you know, where one man is killed half a dozen jump off successfully. The chances of death are only one in six or thereabouts."

"They have picked him up. His lips move. He is speaking."

"Yes, he says : I die a true American."—Scientific American.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

The Cure for Intemperance.

But the great and only real cure for intemperence is the steady elevation of the whole community. To keep men from drinking you must give them something else to do – supply them with better amusements, with entertainments of high order. You cannot expect hard-working men to live without amusement. Rich people must have their amusements, their theatres, balls, clubs, drives, yachts. You cannot require working people to do without some sort of recreation. A total abstinence lecture will not always attract them, nor will a scientific lecture usually be enough. There fore we must furnish them with every kind of innocent recreation possible—public garden and commou and music and fire-works in the summer ; libraries and reading-rooms, and as much more as can be added. I am glad of all cheap popular entertainments, summer gardens and museums. I wish some rich man would endow a zoological garden in Boston. I wish our theatres might have good and entertaining plays acted, and then be open more freely to the poor, for I am satisfied that you can never expel a low taste but by furnishing some thing a little higher.—JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE.

A New Use for Eggs.

Everyone is familiar with the value of the yolk of an Egg as a hair wash, but perhaps may not be aware of its virtue in clothing cleansing. Beaten up with alcohol, eau de cologne, or either, like ox gall, it keeps better and is more powerful; or in simpler cases, it may be used alone, or merely mixed with water, to be rubbed on with flannel, for removing from colored materials the stains of mud, or of coffee and and chocolate, when prepared with milk. It is frequently applied to velvet collars and cuffs, etc., and proves a cleanser, as well as a spot extracter. When it has done its work it is washed off with soap, and the material thoroughly rinsed in pure water. Egg has a specially good effect on those annoying patches of wheel grease belonging to the compound class of stains, as they represent a mixture of stale grease ron or other substances.

If your peach trees were frozen during the winter, trim them back severely. They will recover much better than if left alone.

Peculiar Eccentricity.

An eccentric individual is Dr. Whitney Cleveland, formerly of New Haven, Conn., but now of Colorado. He always wears the garment of a Quaker. He carefully notes all the calls of his practice, but never sends out a bill. Only those pay him who chose to do so. He always uses salt instead of soap for washing his face and head. He never drinks tea, coffee, nor intoxicats. Black clothes are his abhorrance, a cravat or necktie he never wears, and although he keeps his boots oiled he never has them blacked. He is very fond of the water and swims as well now although he is eighty years old as he did when he was eighteen.

DELAWARE RIVER CHEMICAL WORKS,
BAUGH & SONS,
Philadelphia, Feb. 1, 1884.

To Farmers of Pennsylvania :

Gentlemen :—For over twenty-eight years we have manufactured Raw-Bone Phosphates, and our brands have become household words in nearly every section of the country. In many communities the demand for them has increased, while in others the sales have declined, on account of the preference for lower priced goods. Six years ago, finding that the demand for goods of lower cost had become almost universal, and having peculiar advantages of raw materials and manufacturing facilities, we determined to meet this demand, and introduced a TWENTY-FIVE DOLLAR PHOSPHATE, made by a NEW PROCESS EXCLUSIVELY OUR OWN. The quickness with which this Phosphate sprang into use among intelligent farmers will be shown by the following statement :

Of the $25 Phosphate there were sold

During	1879,	1,287	Tons.
"	1880,	3,957	"
"	1881,	5,147	"
"	1882,	8,288	"
"	1883,	10,128	"

The reports of the action of the $25 Phosphate have been satisfactory in every case from a wide inquiry. We want to be informed upon this point very plainly, as it is our interest to know if the article continues to produce good results. We will thank any farmer, having used the $25 Phosphate with disappointing results, to let us hear from him with full facts.

Yours truly,

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR

For the cure of

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, loss of fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

CONSUMPTION

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the CAUSE, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions, free.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and Scrofulous affections—the King of Blood Purifiers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S VEGETABLE WORM DESTROYER is prepared in the form of candy drops, attractive to the sight and pleasant to the taste.
